

Rumours of an Expeditioners' Dinner

'A journey of a thousand miles begins with the first step.' Tao 64

There will be many Old Framlinghamians out there who have a taste for adventure and travel. They will include those who have taken part in one or more of the College's 'Journeys of Self-Discovery' and those who have enjoyed adventures of their own. It may also include friends and partners and those who rightly assume that it is never too late to see the world and who have heard rumours of a forthcoming Old Framlinghamians' Expedition.

Since 1997 more than 250 expeditioners have taken in part in one of the College's 'Journeys of Self-Discovery' to far flung reaches of the world including Bolivia (right 1997), Nepal, Tibet, China, Peru, Namibia, Venezuela (below 2001), Chile and Borneo. Mountains have been climbed; deserts crossed; rivers navigated; jungles explored; sights seen and experiences shared. All who went will remember the noise, smell and bustle of cities such as La Paz, Santiago and Kathmandu. All who went will remember the trekking in spectacular settings and the strong sense of camaraderie that you acquire along the way. The aim throughout was to immerse ourselves in different cultures and embark on adventures and challenges that would enable the expeditioners to look at the lives they would embark upon when they left school in a different way. I am sure those memories will remain a significant part of our lives.

I think 2014 is possibly the time for any like-minded Old Framlinghamian with a passion for travel to meet under the same roof to share tales, meet old friends, make new friends and learn about an exciting Old Framlinghamians' expedition as early as 2015 that I am organising with my father who founded the expedition ethos at Framlingham. Please keep an eye on the OF website for details and if they have not got your current email address please contact them so you don't miss out on any relevant information. Don't forget to also stay in the loop by following the OFs on twitter and facebook.
